THE POWER OF DIFFICULT CONVERSATIONS: Interdisciplinary Approaches to Creating Connection, Compassion and Calm in Family Law

Our work in the field of family law, whether as judges, mental health professionals, attorneys, social workers, mediators or family court services providers, is full of difficult conversations: with colleagues, with the courts, with our clients, with ourselves. Moreover, and more importantly, the people we work with, who we see every day, who we help navigate this tricky terrain, are having difficult conversations with their spouses, partners, children, families, therapists, social workers, doctors, judges, attorneys and others. Perhaps most importantly, they and we are NOT having the sorts of conversations, difficult though they may be, that are necessary to facilitate healthy outcomes. So how can we can navigate these turbulent seas?

Our aim at this annual conference of the AFCC California Chapter is to explore the power of difficult conversations and how they can help create and strengthen relationships, even at their legal end. Difficult conversations can also lead to more empathy in our practices, in our client's cases, and in their lives going forward. Finally, though uncomfortable or charged, difficult conversations can initiate greater clarity and peace of mind in ourselves and those with whom we work.

AFCC has long been dedicated to pushing family law professionals of all disciplines to understand the complexities of modern family life and to find innovative and effective ways to further the interests of children and their parents through separation and divorce.

To that end, the California Chapter of AFCC invites interdisciplinary presentations that will assist professionals to understand and find creative solutions for these diverse challenges. Presenters are urged to "think outside the box," to be innovative both in their ideas and the form of presentation. In addition to lectures and panels, we urge presenters to include interactive demonstrations, creative use of audio and visual tools, and case studies.
